Candidates Answer Student Questions at Forum

MELISSA KUCIREK/SAMANTHA HARVEY

Staff

The four student president/regent candidates answered student questions in a debate held Tuesday in the Nebraska Room of the Milo Bail Student Center. A main problem, according to the students, is student involvement on campus.

"I'd like to get people a lot more involved on campus," candidate Joe Elsasser said. "That's the thrust of everything we're going for."

Elsasser joins candidates Jeff Leanna, incumbent Will Marunda, and former President/Regent Jon Shradar.

In addition this is the first campaign that features vice president candidates. Elsasser's running mate is Steve Sladek. Senior Adam Wright joins the Marunda ticket. Leanna's running mate is Kate Ray. Shradar's choice for vice president is Mike Cunningham.

The first question posed to the candidates, which only the president candidates responded, is how they will leave their mark on UNO and the office.

Marunda responded by comparing his leadership qualities to his fraternity experience.

"Legacy is built on following,"

Marunda said.

He added that he believes in being an inspiring leader.

Shradar responded to the question by negating his own legacy, to that of the students.

"I want what I do as president/regent to have concern with what we want for students," Shradar said. "Being a student advocate and giving equal representation to all students."

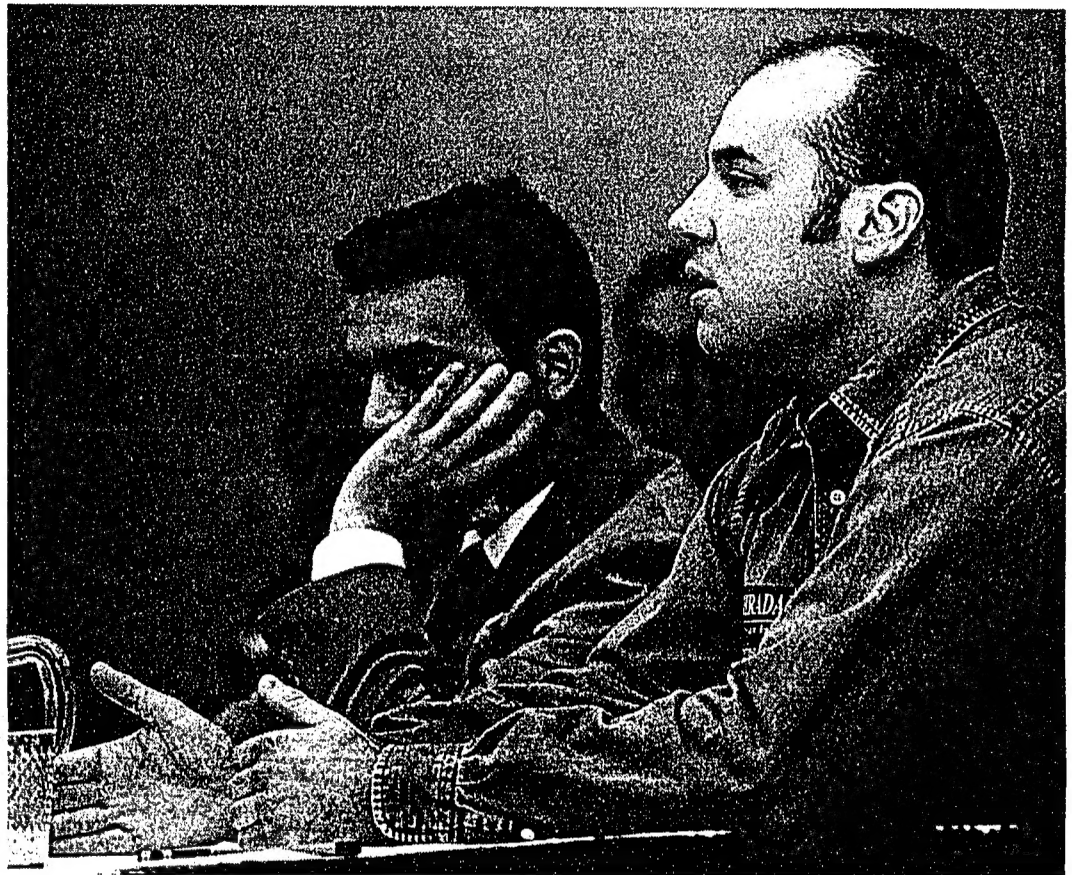

Leanna said he didn't enter the race for personal reasons, but that he and Ray were looking to change students' experiences at UNO.

"If Kate and I are elected," Leanna said. "For if I make a difference in one student's life, it's a success."

Elsasser reminded the candidates and students how important the vice presidential position means to student senate.

"The vice president position is extremely important position because they will be appointing student leaders to key spots on the student senate," Elsasser said.

One student asked how the candidates planned to incorporate diversity and student involvement on campus.

Court Dismisses Campaign Grievance Against Marunda

SANDRA COOPER

Senior Staff Writer

The Student Court dismissed a grievance senior class Senator Joel Richter filed Tuesday against Student President/Regent Will Marunda, which alleged Marunda violated several sections of the student government election rules by allowing Scott Vasek, an Aviation Institute instructor to send campaign literature to his student's e-mail accounts.

Richter said he received a campaign letter on his e-mail account Monday morning from Vasek. To his "utmost surprise" it was a letter from Marunda seeking support for re-election.

Mass e-mails are against campaign rules.

"I remembered something that this may be a possible violation, from my previous time and I just wanted to take a look into it further, so I grabbed the election rules," Richter said.

"I read the e-mail about 10 a.m. and I didn't think about it again until 12:30 p.m. From 12:30 to 2 p.m. I made the decision that I'm going to file the grievance. That when I went straight to the Gateway," said Richter.

He said this whole grievance was based on the matter of principle and fairness to the other candidates running in the election, and this is his first time ever filing a grievance.

Richter is also a friend of Jon Shradar and they both belong to the Theta Chi fraternity. Shradar is one of the candidates in the race for student president/regent, but Richter claims he not a supporter of Shradar.

Marunda is an Aviation Institute Ambassador and Aviation Institute Recipient of NASA Nebraska Space Grant.

"I'm a member of the Aviation institute and I can speak to the students in my organization. This is no different than any other candidate talking to the members in their fraternity, sorority or any other student organizations. This is a common practice," Marunda said.

The e-mail letter was sent to distance-learning students only. These are students that are enrolled at UNO, but live outside Nebraska, and are taking courses on-line.

"It happened that a person that doesn't support me feel that they can use this to imply that I'm cheating and I haven't," Marunda said. "This is clearly to show me in bad character and I'm not going to play that game."

Michaela Schaaf, an associate professor in the Aviation Institute said the e-mail was sent to a selected group of students who would not otherwise have seen the flyers of the candidates here on campus. She also said Richter received instructor permission to enroll in the distance-learning course.

"I was not asked by Will Marunda to send the message. I offered to send it and I made it clear to him that if any other candidate asks, I'll do the same for them," Vasek said.

At a Student Senate meeting held Wednesday, Chief Justice Katie McWilliam and the student court handed down the decision to dismiss Richter's grievance.

"It is the court's opinion that there is a difference between mass e-mail going to the entire student body compared to sending it to an organization," the decision stated.

Though the grievance was dismissed, the court did issue Marunda a written warning because Vasek sent the e-mail. Anyone who campaigns on behalf of a student candidate must be a registered student, said Nate Thompson, student organizations advisor.

Issues, Promises and Platforms

CM Chris Machia

Jeff Leanna
"Making a difference, one student at a time."
"Students are becoming obsessively late to class because they couldn't get on a shuttle. There are students at Scott Hall who wait 40 minutes to get on a shuttle...Parking should not interfere with students who want to go to class, because that's what we're here for, is to get an education."

CM Chris Machia

Jon Shradar
"Changing the face of the university. That's what I did last time as president/regent. That's what we'll do next time."
"If we keep our door open, we're there for people no matter what race, no matter what color, and we're open to their ideas and different things and be receptive of that."

CM Chris Machia

Joe Elsasser
"I'd like to see everyone use their voice to vote."
"Our goals this year are to focus on attainable goals that we can do, things that are tangible, that you can hold in your hand and see that, yes, the university is making progress."

JH Jon Helgasor

Will Marunda
"Proven leadership, experience, maturity and accountability that students demand. I'm running on my record."
"This is a very bold statement, to say that you are going to work on parking because students will want follow-through on this."

Leanna said he looked into starting a program on campus called S.O.A.R., student organizations and activities recruitment, which is a movement that would get the administration and university to assist with getting students involved on campus.

"I think one of the biggest problems on campus is a lot of apathy," Leanna added. "We're an urban campus, we don't have a lot of people on campus, which hurts student involvement for everybody."

A student assembly, which would allow student organizations the opportunity to network with the other organizations, would provide a perfect recruitment tool, Elsasser said.

"I think this would greatly increase the number of student organizations that are involved and the size of the events that they put on," Elsasser added.

"Getting more people involved starts with the self," Marunda said. There are some people on this campus that absolutely do not want to get involved."

Marunda added that students who are interested need to make sure they attend the events around campus and not limit themselves to one organization.

Accessibility and fun are Shradar's ingredients to incorporating student involvement.

"I really think there are too many restrictions for student life on campus," Shradar said. "We have to have the ability to create our own student culture, our own campus tradition, we need our own campus community."

The president/regent candidates took a few minutes to discuss their top three concerns on campus.

Shradar said his three issues were student advocacy, equal representation for all students on campus and enjoyment of the college experience.

"I don't want to go to a school that I can't make a joke and laugh about it," Shradar said. "I still do good in school and get good grades, but I still want to be able to have fun. I want to go to a Maverick football game and get a little loud every once in a while."

The three issues Marunda said that he is running on are the parking problem, maintaining a full senate at all times and accountable student leadership.

"Most of you know this, but there is a parking problem at UNO," Marunda said. "This year it has taken on a new dynamic. I am going to work toward coordinating a parking plan."

Elsasser said his three main concerns are student services, focusing on attaining a Mav bucks program, which would allow students to use their IDs as a type of credit card, and online teacher evaluations. His third issue is creating a student assembly and changing the rules for the vice president requirement.

"Our goals are to focus on attainable goals," Elsasser said. "Things that we can do, things that are tangible, things that you can hold in your hand and see that yes the university is making progress."

Leanna's platform is better technology, social security numbers not being used as identification numbers and the student organization and activities recruitment.

"Students don't feel like they are a part of this university," Leanna said. "That is the one thing that is holding UNOmaha back from greatness. We could be so much more than what we are now."

Walk Raises Money for Humane Society

AUTUM RICE
Staff Writer

Diversity matters. It has to when talking about over 900 animals in Elmwood Park where the Nebraska Humane Society hosted its 11th annual "Walk for the Animals" fundraiser Oct. 1.

At least 1,000 Omaha-area residents came together to celebrate the animal kingdom and support the NHS. Participants in the walk made contributions of $25 or more to register and walk one of three marked courses with or without their favorite furry friends. Gifts for donations based on amount included a gift bag with a doggie bandana, a Frisbee and coupons, as well as t-shirts, stainless steel mugs and two-week memberships to the PowerHouse Gym.

Dawn Kozak of Omaha, a first-year walk volunteer, was amazed at the size of the turnout.

"I can't believe so many people came," she said.

Kozak was also impressed with the number of vendors who set up booths to cater the event at reasonable costs. Her family had donated to the NHS for years before. Instead of dollars, she donated her time to continue the legacy.

"There's no way I could donate the kind of money my grandmother did, so I volunteer at the shelter instead," Kozak said. "It's a great cause and I love animals."

Amidst cats on leashes and one notable goat, two English Sheep dogs stood out in the crowd. Paula and Shane Hagemeyer of Bellevue, Nada and Cloe's proud "mother and father," were also overwhelmed with the size of the crowd.

"I think it's awesome!" Paula Hagemeyer said. "It's incredible to see all of these people here and how much they love their pets, it's so obvious and inspiring!"

Avid supporters of many animal charities, including the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and the World Wildlife Federation, the Hagemeyers were also first-year participants in the walk but said they will definitely be in attendance next year.

The walk began at noon, followed by many activities attendees could watch or participate in to show off their pets.

The Parade of Breeds, an agility demonstration, Stupid Pet Tricks, a silent auction and a raffle featuring as first prize a 48-inch Sony television were just a few extra events enjoyed by all. A tree-climbing dog was a particular novelty in the Stupid Pet Trick sequence.

The result of all donations received totaled to well over the NHS's goal of $75,000. Second Chance Medical Rehabilitation, the Spay/Neuter Program, Ani-Meals and Adopt-A-Pet are just a few of the programs that will receive support from this benefit. Some of the most devoted sponsors at the walk were area businesses that actively support the NHS. KPTM Fox 42's Ron Gerard helped emcee the event with the NHS Director of Marketing and Public Relations Darcy Beck and Verizon Wireless sponsored some of the gift bag paraphernalia. Other retail sponsors included PetsMart, the Dawg House Sports Café and lams.

Beck thought the walk was a great opportunity for all animal lovers.

"The most important part of the walk is that it bonds people with their pets, with other animal lovers and with the Humane Society," Beck said. "This is what truly makes it a success."

A Night With Roxette

a review by MELISSA KUCIREK

Senior Staff Writer

Twenty-year-old Amy Hanus paced outside, gripping her Kodak disposable camera, praying for a limo to pull up beside her. She staked out the place for even a glance or possibility for an autograph from the Swedish rock group Roxette.

"I've been a Roxette fan my whole life," Hanus said. "I have every single, even all of their imports. I cried for days when I found out it was a 21-and-over show."

Hanus may have been too young to get into the Music Box Sunday night, but a crowd of just over 500 was on hand to witness Sweet 98 KQKQ's first ever Zootopia presentation. The featured artist Roxette's performance sounded crisp and left the crowd cheering for more.

Roxette, a duo fronted by Marie Fredriksson and Per Gessle, first teamed up in 1985, and took the United States by storm with 1988's "Look Sharp!" which also became Sweden's second best selling album in history. Their first number-one single in America came in 1989 with "The Look." That same year, "Listen to Your Heart" topped the charts. "Dangerous" stalled at number two.

Perhaps Fredriksson and Gessle's most well-known tune is "It Must Have Been Love" from the box-office smash "Pretty Woman"'s soundtrack. The song went to number one in 1990, one year later "Joyride" did the same. "Fading Like a Flower (Everytime You Leave)" marked the end of their US dominance in 1991, shooting to number two on Billboard.

Since the early '90s, Roxette has found phenomenal success in Europe and elsewhere on the globe. In April 2000 the band signed with Edel America Records and have released a greatest hits compilation, "Don't Bore Us, Get to the Chorus."

Sunday night definitely wasn't a bore.

Introduced as "so popular in Sweden they have their own postage stamp," Roxette took to the stage at 8:30 p.m., after a half-hour long '80s montage of hits including "Mickey" courtesy of Sweet 98 disc jockey Jay Towers.

Joined by four other musicians, Fredriksson and Gessle opened the show with their current single, "Wish I Could Fly." Fredriksson's voice sounded crisp and too strong to come from such a petite lady. It's a mellow song, with solid pop composition.

But the second song, "Must Have Been Love," which Fredriksson introduced as a song "from an old movie," sent couples to the dance floor. As they danced with their significant others, some audience members around them held up their lighters.

Next up came "Joyride." The tune picked up the tempo and gave Gessle his chance to show off his talent. The last song played, "The Look," sent the crowd to its feet and derived endless "Na, na, na, na, na's."

Roxette did play an encore, but completed its entire set in just 30 minutes. This was the night's biggest disappointment. Roxette has an accomplished portfolio and it didn't even sing "Dangerous," which many of the crowd begged for between songs.

Roxette described its music as a perfect blend of their voices.

"It's melodic, very special," Fredriksson said, in a post-show interview.

"That especially comes out in 'Don't Bore Us,'" Gessle said. "It has a positive, good vibe to it."

Fredriksson notes the Beatles, David Bowie and the Eurythmics as musical influences. "My big influence is mainly from the '60s and '70s," Fredriksson said.

Guitar player Andreas Karlegard, who has been touring with Roxette since 1999, says his favorite songs to perform with the duo are "Joyride" and "Wish I Could Fly."

Like Karlegard, I thought that all of Roxette were virtuoso musicians, and looked seasoned to performing.

Zootopia, according to Sweet 98 radio personality Wayne Coy, offered the station a chance to introduce listeners to the new morning show, "Morning Zoo."

"The timing was good and it was an excuse to throw a good party," Coy said.

Listeners had the chance to win tickets to this invitation-only concert during the Morning Zoo show. Coy spoke with record company executive Barry Pinlanc to bring Roxette to Omaha. Roxette had been involved in a series of limited promotional tours.

"I knew that the record was happening internationally," Coy said. "They were doing limited promotional tours. Roxette's appeal is over 21. This (the Music Box) is the perfect venue."

As I left the show, I said my thank yous to the band. When I turned back, there was Hanus finally putting her Kodak to use.

The writings and opinions of Dr. Love are not those of the Gateway Staff. We take no responsibility for his actions or his behaviors. We can't stop him, we can only hope to contain him.

Dear Dr. Love,

I've been dating this girl for almost three weeks. The problem is she's starting to get a little too serious too soon for me. She calls me every day, questions everything I do and gets mad if I make plans without informing her. Am I wrong for not wanting to rush into something so serious or am I just too independent for a relationship?

Not Really Committed

NRC,

If this environment isn't you, then run, run as far as possible, run to the bar, to the club, to the 20's, no matter what just run from this situation. If you're not ready for something so deep that you feel trapped, break it off and go your way. It's obvious she expects more and no matter what you say she won't be happy till she has more, so cut her loose.

DL

Dear DL,

I'm having a problem. I've been at UNO since the summer and I can't seem to get any ladies to notice me. I'm an attractive guy but the girls here are just so difficult to understand. Where I'm from women flocked to me. Here women keep walking when I say hi, what's the deal?

What's the Deal?

WTD,

Welcome to Omaha, girls here at a bit like that. What I suggest is that you give just a little attention to few, make it seem that you're a bit social so others can find it easy to approach you. Don't really try to hook up with a girl on campus just yet though, wait till you have mastered Omaha girls before you move on to campus territory. Once you're ready, it shouldn't be a problem to always have a girl at your side.

DL

Dear DL,

I'm a single lesbian on campus. I have this friend I'm very attracted to. She and I have been involved on numerous occasions, but she still claims to be straight. She has a boyfriend and he doesn't know about the times we've been together. I want to have her for myself and enjoy all those qualities involved in a relationship of that sort. What can I do to convince her that we are meant to be?

Lesbian in Love

Dear LL,

You're in a tough position. It sounds as if your friend is bisexual. I'd be the first to admit that many a women have passed me by due to the preference of the same sex. Though her boyfriend makes her happy, so do you. But you're both missing something, I don't want to venture into what that is but it affects her choice of choosing a partner. If you can't accept what's going on then you should be like Forrest Gump and run. Find that happiness somewhere else, it's not fair that she can walk around with a smile while you look so sad. Hope it works out.

HOROSCOPES

by Madame Zora

Leo

(July 23 - Aug. 22)

The smell of hot fresh french fries has been teasing your senses lately. You continue spinning in circles trying to catch the smell. Try not to look too stupid doing this.

Virgo

(Aug. 23 - Sept. 22)

People use the word life as such an abstract and foreign word. Remember, life is just an accumulation of days, nothing bigger, nothing more.

Libra

(Sept. 23 - Oct. 23)

This week, your literary spirit is rejuvenated. The vines draped over the old house like a child's lazy legs dangling over the side of a wall. They were dying. Golden brown on the edges, the leaves curled inwards escaping from the outside world they had always known.

Scorpio

(Oct. 24 - Nov. 21)

This week is Feed the Birds week. Glue birdseed to your head and stand outside and wait for the birds.

Sagittarius

(Nov. 22 - Dec. 21)

This week your power color is puce. Half your mission is to find out what color this actually is.

Capricorn

(Dec. 22 - Jan. 19)

Your shoelaces seem to have a mind of their own. They begin to unlace every time you are about to cross a busy intersection. Try super glue to keep them together — your life depends on it.

Aquarius

(Jan. 20 - Feb. 18)

You are disgusted by the fact that the main ingredient in fish food is fish meal. It is your job to inform the American public about this injustice.

Pisces

(Feb. 19 - March 20)

All this week you have a craving for fish. Strap on your fishing overalls and head to the nearest lake.

Aries

(March 21 - Apr. 19)

Everywhere you go, people will stop stare. It isn't your rugged good looks that are catching their attention, but the pink heart t-shirt you have on.

Taurus

(Apr. 20 - May 20)

Your computer has disowned you. Whatever you attempt to do on it will not work. Either get rid of it or turn it into a planter.

Gemini

(May 21 - June 21)

Your motto this week is "Just dance!" When you asked what you want to eat when ordering food, respond, "Just dance!" When the professor asks you a question in class, say "Just dance!"

Cancer

(June 22 - July 22)

This week is your lucky week. You will stumble on about $100 in cash rolled up by the side of the Eppley building. Maybe I shouldn't have publicly announced this.

Red-Hot Wright and Co. Face Rival UNC in Homecoming Game

CORY CARLSON

Staff Writer

While the homecoming candidates circulate their annual propaganda this week, the No. 12-ranked UNO football team is preparing to face its chief rival to see who will be crowned king of the gridiron in the annual series.

No. 22 Northern Colorado comes to town boasting a 3-2 overall record, 2-1 in conference play. UNC is led by first year Head Coach Kay Dalton.

The series has been tight, with the Mavs holding a slight 17-15 edge dating back to 1947. Neither team has won a game on the road in this series since 1984.

Last year's contest had all the feeling of a heavyweight boxing match. The bout had ten lead changes with Harlon Hill Trophy-winner Corte McGuffey tossing the winning touchdown with 1:23 to play to knock out the Mavs 43-39. The teams combined for a remarkable 855 yards of total offense. The record-setting McGuffey has taken his records and his game to the professional level, but did not leave the cupboard empty at UNC.

Following his season-ending knee injury on Sept. 9, incumbent quarterback junior Mark Passard has given way to junior Jon Boyer. Boyer has completed over 50 percent of his throws for almost 240 yards per game, and has tossed for seven touchdowns. Sophomore wide receiver George Carroll leads the team in receptions with 21 catches for 464 yards and two touchdowns.

The Bears' running attack has proven adequate in setting up the pass. It is led up front by Street and Smith's preseason All-American senior Ryan Burkholder. Burkholder, the squad's left tackle, paves the way for senior running back Wes Daniels. Daniels has scored three touchdowns and run for 378 yards in three games.

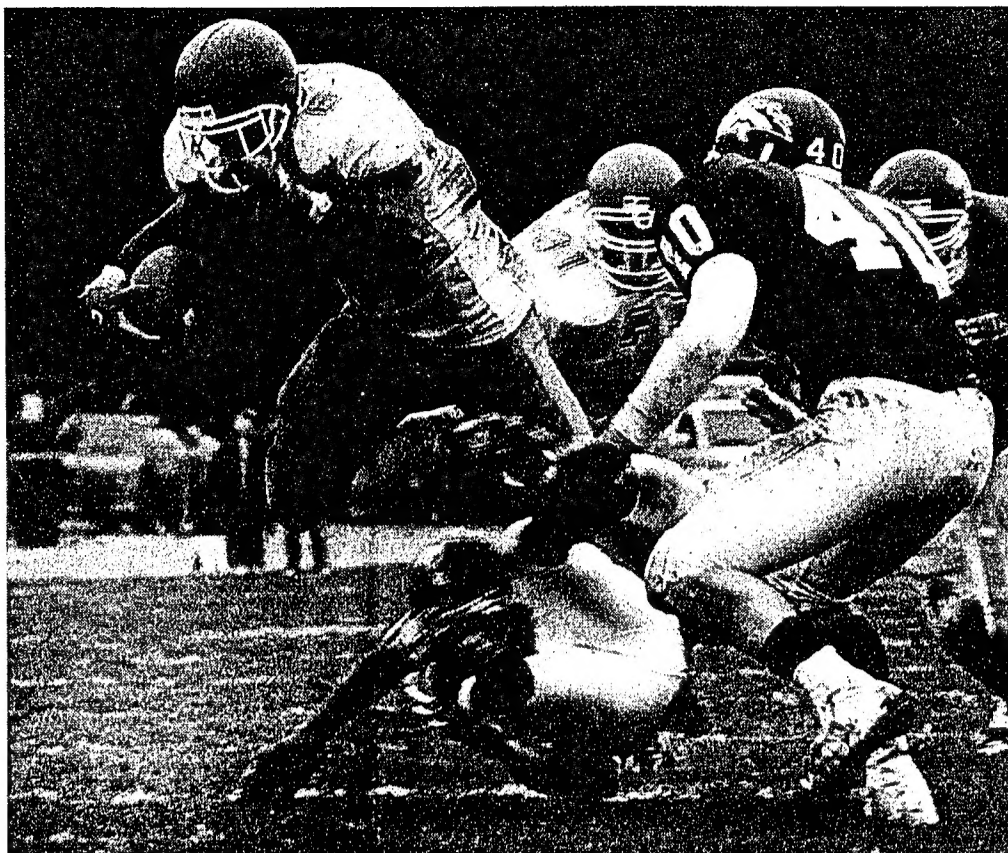

The Bears are averaging 402.6 total offense yards per contest. The stellar Mav defense is allowing just over 232 yards, a stingy 3.9 yards per play. Something will have to give.

The young UNC defense has developed quickly, led by junior linebacker Justin Reece (40 tackles, 1.5 sacks, two pass breakups).

Mav senior tailback Adam Wright tries for his fourth straight 200-yard game against a group which allows only 78.2 yards on the ground per game. Wright rushed for 100 yards and two touchdowns in Greeley a year ago.

Junior quarterback Seth Tuman returned to practice this week and, along with converted wideout sophomore Sam Gutz, will backup redshirt freshman Trey Guidry.

The Mavs play four of their last six games at home. UNO has won its last 22 regular season home games dating back to a one-point loss to Mankato State in 1996.

Adam Wright has been running over his competition lately, becoming a leading rusher in Division II football.

Maverick Soccer Steamroller Headed for South Dakota

BRIAN BRASHAW

Staff Writer

After racking up 18 goals in two home matches last weekend, the Maverick soccer team hopes to continue its dominance against a pair of North Central Conference opponents Saturday and Sunday.

On this weekend's slate are Augustana and South Dakota State, both teams playing in their inaugural season. These two teams are a combined 8-13, however, Augustana is ranked above UNO in the conference with 3-0 NCC record.

Augustana will host the Mavericks in Sioux Falls, S.D., to begin weekend play. The Vikings are one of only two undefeated teams in the conference, the other being Northern Colorado. Augustana relies on a pair of forwards for offense, junior Megan Gartner (six goals, five assists) and freshman Heather Frost (six goals).

In goal for Head Coach Shelly Nelson is sophomore Tanja Aas, who has posted a 4-7 record and a 3.87 goals against average.

South Dakota State shows a 4-6 overall record, 1-2 in the NCC. The Jackrabbits host UNO Sunday in Brookings. Sophomore Jenny Briggs leads the team in offense with 10 goals.

Two different net minders have seen action for South Dakota State's head coach Lang Wedemeyer. Molly Lennon has posted a 1.86 GAA, while Nellie Stebbins has a 2.49 GAA. Stebbins also leads the team in assists with four.

UNO takes a 9-3 record into this weekend. The Mavs are led in offense by Tai Zuckweiler's seven goals. Zuckweiler has scored twice in three different games. Goalkeeper Michelle Villaneuva keeps Head Coach Don Klosterman's team steady with a 1.14 GAA and four shutouts.

Two convincing wins over South Dakota (8-1) and Morningside (10-1) last weekend earned UNO votes in the national rankings, but the team fell short of breaking back into the top 25.

The Mavericks play a Wednesday home game against Rockhurst before returning to the road and conference play at Northern Colorado next weekend.

Mavs Still No. 3 in NCC

MELISSA KUCIREK

Senior Staff Writer

The UNO volleyball team stalled at No. 3 in the AVCA Division II Coaches poll released Tuesday. After falling to No. 7 South Dakota State University and winning against No. 2 Augustana College last weekend, the Mavs are tied with West Texas A&M.

UNO (16-1) hosts the No. 10 University of Northern Colorado (15-4) Saturday at Sapp Fieldhouse. The first serve floats over the net at 6 p.m.

The Bears are in a three-way tie at the top with UNO and North Dakota State, all with a 5-1 North Central Conference record.

Head Coach Linda Delk is in her 25th season with UNO. Her leading offensive threat is senior Tia Self. At 5-10, Self is a three-time all NCC pick. Delk also mentions freshman middle-blocker Erin Deffenbaugh as a top gun.

Deffenbaugh, a 5-10 Strasburg, CO, native, leads her team in hitting percentage (.289), kills (306) and digs (252).

Delk is confident in her young team, which also includes freshman setter Linnea Kiilsgaard. Kiilsgaard stepped up to the starting position after graduation of Michelle Hoffner. The Auburn, Wash., native is averaging 12.9 assists a game.

"They are showing a lot of composure for a young team," Delk said. "They fight back at tough situations."

So far the Bears biggest challenge has been from the Augustana squad. In the end, Augustana came out on top in five games.

Delk kept watch on the results of UNO's matches versus SDSU and Augustana. She was not surprised that after SDSU's upset, UNO took control over Augustana.

"I was not surprised by UNO's win over Augustana," Delk said. "UNO has a lot of class and a lot of character. I know UNO is going to be a battle."

Live Wire

They made a mistake letting me get close to the ice at the Civic Auditorium Sunday during media day. Now that I've gotten a whiff of that intoxicating smell, I'm not going to stop talking hockey until April.

Isn't it glorious? This time of year football is in full bloom, hockey is getting ready to drop the puck, and the weather is still nice enough to squeeze in a couple more rounds of golf. The best part is, some of the "experts" are picking the Colorado Avalanche to win the Stanley Cup.

However, I'm not here to do a National Hockey League preview, I'm here to hype hockey in the heartland.

Queue the music ...

Ladies and Gentlemen: Good evening and welcome to the bullpen!

Fresh from their magical playoff run, where they knocked off the Mighty Michigan Wolverines, and came 60 minutes from breaking into the NCAA tourney (better known as the Big Ice Dance), please welcome the Central Collegiate Hockey Association playoff runners-up, your 2000-01 U-N-O Mavericks!

"You get thunder struck."

I can hear it now ... the roar of 8,314 of the most raucous fans of college hockey. All of them on their feet as the Mavericks are introduced Friday night at the Civic. The long-awaited return of UNO Hockey is finally over.

And that's only the beginning. Talk about big time? The Mavericks earned the respect of the nation with the run last year. UNO is ranked No. 13 in US College Hockey's poll, and No. 14 in the USA Today poll.

Next week, Omaha will be the center of the college hockey world. UNO will host its first tournament, the Maverick Stampede. Three of the most prestigious college hockey programs are going to congregate here Oct. 13 and 14 for the most important event in UNO's hockey history. Why most important?

If this tournament, where three different conferences are represented, goes off successfully, it could lead to Omaha earning a regional host spot.

The Boston College Eagles will be making their first trek to Omaha. The Eagles are the only team in the tournament to have never played the Mavericks. Boston College is ranked by USCH as the No. 4 team in the nation, and is coming off an unbelievable season. The Eagles made it to the national championship game before being knocked off by North Dakota.

Maverick Hockey Time in Omaha

Notre Dame, ranked No. 20 in the nation, will be making its second trip to the Aud. The Irish haven't had much luck in Omaha, just 0-1-1 at the Bullpen. The good news for Notre Dame is that it may not have to face UNO. Notre Dame opens Friday night against Boston College, and depending on the outcome, may face either UNO or Niagara Saturday.

The Niagara Purple Eagles have had a little more success against UNO in Omaha. Niagara pounded the Mavericks 6-0 in their first meeting last season. However UNO did rebound to salvage a 3-3 tie the next night. Niagara earned one of the 12 NCAA tourney spots and won its first-round game against New Hampshire before falling to North Dakota.

The Purple Eagles are no stranger to tough competition. The one spot Niagara could be hurting most is at goalie. Greg Gardner, who set a NCAA record for shutouts last year, has graduated.

If all goes as planned, UNO will be facing the Eagles both games: Niagara Friday, and Boston College in the championship Saturday.

This tournament is not to be missed by even the most casual college hockey fan. Get a ticket. Beg, steal, borrow, just get a ticket.

Omaha hockey history is being built right now. The early years are being shaped as I type. In two-five years, UNO could be the place to go for college hockey. Be apart of it. Be apart of the crowd that is nationally becoming known as the party on the prairie. God willing, UNO makes it back to Detroit. Take the trip.

I'm done until next time, when we discuss the injury causing sprinkler heads at Aksarben Field.

Go Mavericks!

From the Sports Desk

by David Johnson

There is a changing of the guard in the National Football League.

New blood.

It happens every decade. Nothing to worry about, though. Actually, something to enjoy.

Since the advent of free agency, fans have had a difficult time staying loyal to one particular team. As soon as you jump on some team's bandwagon, they trade or lose all your favorite players. Most fans today follow a multitude of different players, on a multitude of different teams.

Some fans spread their interest for money and fun (fantasy football leagues), some to follow players who graduated from their favorite college teams, some simply want to watch good football regardless of who is playing.

Others enjoy the changing of that old guard.

Every year, sports analysts debate the BIG QUESTION: If you were starting a team from scratch today, who would be the first player you would pick?

In the 1970s, you might have said Terry Bradshaw, Bob Griese, Tony Dorsett or Mean Joe Greene.

In the 1980s, you might have said Joe Montana, Walter Payton, Jerry Rice, Dan Marino, Jim Kelly, Thurman Thomas or LeRoy Selmon.

In the decade of the '90s, you may have chosen Steve Young, Troy Aikman, Barry Sanders, Emmitt Smith, John Elway or Warren Sapp.

Today, there is a whole new legion of players ... young, talented, tough players. Who would you pick?

Would you want a proven veteran to lead your team? Would you want the best athlete available? Would you want a young stud with brains and brawn, and let him grow and mature in your system?

Here are my choices:

Quarterback — Peyton Manning. Yes, I know Kurt Warner is the reigning Super Bowl field general, and he has a supreme touch, but I think Manning is the future. He's tall, more agile than Warner, and he's the most intelligent quarterback in the league. Ryan Leaf proved that brute strength can only get you so far; it is intelligence which separates the men from the boys at this position. He is a workaholic whose idea of a good time is watching game films late into the evenings. Pure pedigree QB.

Running Back — Marshall Faulk. What? Not Terrell Davis? Not Stephen Davis? Not Tiki Barber? Nope. I want the best all-around back in the league. I want the guy who holds the record for total yards by a back in a season. I want a back who can average over 4.5 yards per carry up the middle, and catch the ball on a swing pass in the flat. Faulk is only 27-years old and is a Super Bowl champ.

Fullback — Mike Alstott. Probably not a lot of argument here. Gets 3.7 yards per carry and can block like a diesel truck. Money inside the five-yard line. Has only lost one fumble this season.

Wide Receiver — Torry Holt. Not huge (6-0, 190), but can burn any corner in the league. Has quiet hands and is the best over-the-shoulder receiver around. Averaging over 25 yards per reception. And the best part? He's only 24-years old.

Wide Receiver — Terrell Owens. At 6-3, 217, Owens has the size, strength, and speed (ex-4X400 relay track man) to last a long time in this league. Now that Jerry Rice is looking at the autumn of his career, Owens can now emerge as the new 49er star. He's just 26-years old and starting to hit his stride. Not afraid to catch it over the middle, and definitely knows his way around any end zone.

Defensive Player — Warren Sapp. He's 6-2, 303 and (with apologies to Junior Seau fans) is the most-feared player in the game. You'd think he's been around forever, but he's still just 27-years old. You can't run through him. You can't run by him. You can't run away from him. And, don't stand in the pocket too long — he's already pulled 5.5 sacks in the first four games this season.

Well, there you go. My picks around which to build my team of the new millennium.
